

WESTON RECOUNT VITAL ISSUE

Both Sides Ready To Go To Bat; Recount No Expense to County

The Election Contest for the office of Sheriff of Will County being heard before County Judge Ralph C. Austin is now at trial. Alvah M. Weston is represented by Attorneys Edward D. Nadelhoffer and David R. Anderson. Attorneys William C. Mooney, Robert V. Martin, Frank J. Wise and Thomas F. Donovan appeared for Albert E. Markgraf.

The first witness to be called was County Clerk Albin F. Delander. Mr. Nadelhoffer examined Mr. Delander as to how the ballots were returned the day after election (November 3, 1926). Mr. Delander said he together with Deputy County Clerks George Anderson and Frank Zielinski received the ballot sacks in the Probate Court Room on the day of November 3, 1927, and that all returns were made before the time limit had elapsed. Mr. Delander said a receipt was given each Election Judge as he returned the ballot sacks. The election sacks were put in a large basket and taken to the fourth floor of the Court house where the vaults are located by two of the Court House Janitors under the supervision of Mr. Delander himself, he said.

Mr. Nadelhoffer examined Mr. Delander as to the thickness of the walls of the vault, the kind of a door and lock on same. Mr. Delander said the walls were about a foot thick and the inside dimensions of the vault about ten feet by twelve feet. The door is made by a safe company and is a five tumbler combination. Mr. Delander testified there is nothing in the vault but the ballots of the November election and some old claims against the County.

Mr. Nadelhoffer asked Mr. Delander if he kept a record of the ballots returned and Mr. Delander said he kept a record in a bound book called "Record of Ballots". Mr. Nadelhoffer asked Mr. Delander to produce this book. The book had the Townships and Precincts listed the number of ballots given the Judge of the Precinct on November 1st the name of the Judge receiving the ballots, the date of the returns, Number of ballots voted and the number of unused ballots, and the Judges name who returned the ballot sacks. Mr. Nadelhoffer offered this book as evidence in the case and Attorney Robert Martin objected to this book on the grounds that it was hearsay on the part of Mr. Delander because the names of the Judges making the returns were written in the handwriting of Deputy Clerk Frank Zielinski. Mr. Nadelhoffer contended that this book was as much a record of the County Clerks office as any paper on file there. Mr. Martin said it was not a record but a memorandum. Mr. Anderson said it was required according to the Illinois Statutes. Mr. Martin said there was nothing in the Statute requiring such a record. Mr. Anderson found the place in the Statute and handed it to Judge Austin to read. Mr. Martin declined to read it so Judge Austin said "Such a book was required according to the Statute. Mr. Martin still objected and Judge Austin sustained the objection because it did not prove anything.

Mr. Nadelhoffer then asked Mr. Delander to look over the poll books, tally sheets and envelopes and state whether or not they were the official poll books, tally sheets and envelopes used in the general election November 2, 1926. After examining these books, sheets and envelopes Mr. Delander stated they were the same. Mr. Nadelhoffer offered these books, tally sheets and envelopes as evidence and Mr. Martin said "The only ones who could identify these books, tally sheets and envelopes would be the members of the Election Board in their respective precincts". Mr. Nadelhoffer claimed that they should be admitted as evidence because they were the same as used by the County Clerk and two Justices of the Peace in the Official Canvass, and that Mr. Delander had testified that he personally had opened them. Judge Austin sustained Mr. Martin's objection giving as his grounds (continued page 4, col. 1)

Kindergarten For Mokena School Is Suggested

A new enterprise is about to be tried out in Mokena, in answer to a crying need. It is that of a kindergarten.

Mrs. Florence Lauffer, who after completing a high school course took up two years work in Cornell college making Kindergarten work her major study, and has fine experience in that line.

A number of parents in Mokena have approached her on thought of having her establish one here. In response to that demand she is calling a meeting of all parents and all else interested in having this work commenced in Mokena, to meet her Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock in the school house to talk over plans. Mrs. Lauffer thinks of conducting this kindergarten, if sufficient backing is shown, during April, May and June as a try out. Then during the summer months she plans to give one afternoon a week to children with supervised games, story hour, etc., thus relieving mothers for that one afternoon a week, giving them a chance for something else. This will prove a mutual benefit to mothers and children. Mrs. Lauffer also is planning if this work is wanted, to care for children by the hour.

Kindergarten has always proved a great help to children when they enter school and such a thing would be an asset to Mokena. It is hoped a large response will be given to this invitation.

At that time it was voted to build the new school on the old site but sentiment was against this plan hence the election for a new site. The new school is to cost in the neighborhood of $27,000 and will be of modern construction. Work will be started soon.

COL. C. R. MILLER THANKS NEWS-BULLETIN FOR STORY ON ROUTE 51 HEARING

The News-Bulletin has received the following letter from Col. C. R. Miller, Director of the Department of Public Works & Buildings, Springfield:

The News-Bulletin, Dear Sir: Please accept thanks for copy of your paper, "The News-Bulletin" of March 19, with such a complete write-up of the Public Hearing on State Bond Issue Route 51, held in Chicago. Yours very truly, C. R. MILLER, Director.

Archie Utt Sums Up Service of Municipal Band

"If the municipal band did nothing but give us half a dozen concerts during the year, every taxpayer in Oak Lawn will have had more than his money's worth from his investment."

In these words does Archie Utt, Village Clerk of Oak Lawn, sum up the services which a municipal band renders to the community. Mr. Utt was one of the sponsors of the two mill tax movement for band purposes, which is to be voted on by local citizens at the April election.

"What a town like Oak Lawn needs more than anything else is good, clean, wholesome entertainment that the family may enjoy together," says Mr. Utt. Nothing so quickly brings people out and in their friendliest mood than open air music of a community or patriotic nature. It is a sociable gathering. People who seldom meet on other occasions not only meet but stop to chat because they have leisure. And the more people in the town who call each other by their first names, the better off the town. Half a dozen patriotic concerts during the year will do more for Oak Lawn than five times the same money spent on almost any other municipal improvement. And in all probability the band will give us more than this.

A band supported by voluntary contributions is like a mickle in the slot piano; when the nickels give out the music stops. And somebody has to get out and pass the hat. You can't expect a band to amount to much if its members have to be worrying constantly about money. Let's put music in our annual budget by passing the band proposition at the April election, and stop passing the hat.

"The first state that passed the law enabling its cities to support a band by taxation established the fact that a town needs music as it needs civic beauty-parks, boulevards and handsome buildings, and just as it needs sanitation and police protection."

Observe St. Patrick Day The Sag Hall

St. Patrick's Day Sag Bridge on March 17, at 8 p. m. a most delightful entertainment was staged at the Sag Hall, by the Kappa Beta Sorority of St. Mary's High school 1031 Cypress Street, Chicago. St. Mary's High school has an enrollment of over 900 young ladies. The Sorority young ladies staged an excellent operetta consisting of twelve numbers. The readings, dances, instrumental and vocal selections displayed wonderful training and rare artistic taste. The opening chorus "My Wild Irish Rose", the readings by the Misses Jeanette Salmon, Eleanor Ruppert and Charlotte Maguire were admirable. The dances by little Virginia Ruppert, Billie Carroll and the Misses Mary Madden and Catherine Casey were excellent.

McGee and Miss Mary Cooney and the violin duet by Miss Sarah and Miss Casey were exquisite. The songs by Miss Gertrude Kane and the closing chorus with the Kappa Beta song of the Sorority, were superlative. The entertainment was a grand instance of the elegant education for which St. Mary's is famous. Our piano player who does not wish his name mentioned, was matchless. The whole entertainment was the priceless end of a perfect day. St. James pastor and people and guests heartily thank the peerless entertainers of March 17 at the Sag Hall and are wistfully waiting for their welcome return.

Mokena To Improve Streets

Mokena is looking forward to a street improvement program this spring. The village board has engaged county surveyor Zarley to survey the streets of the village in order to get a lineup on property and street lines.

It is understood that Neithammer Avenue from the Julius Hirsch corner north to the W. H. Bechstein premises is to be improved with a stone dressing. It is understood that the village will pay for the grading of this thoroughfare and to lay tiles along same to care for the surface drainage and that the property owners along this street will buy the stone and have it put down at their expense. A petition is being circulated among the interested property owners to raise the money it is reported.

Will County Needs Clean Politics, Jail Break Proves

Much has been printed and said about the lax conditions at the Will County jail at Joliet which recently resulted in the escape of three desperate Mexican murders and the fatal shooting of a Chicago policeman when the killers attempted to resist arrest, thus plunging another home in sorrow, leaving a widow and a child without a father, all for what?

The blame for the jail break is placed on various persons and all are passing the buck. Charges of bribery have been made, a few of the guards have been fired, but this does not clean up the mess.

The conditions at the jail are to blame. It is amazing to learn how easy it was for the Mexican women now held by the Will County authorities to pass in saws and guns as has been charged with the guards present. The ridiculous part of this fiasco is that these women were allowed to converse with the convicts in Spanish and lay all the plans and plots right under the very noses of the guards. Imagine any official allowing anyone to talk to desperate criminals in a foreign tongue. It is to laugh!

The killers were allowed too much freedom and were pampered and petted like kids from what has appeared in the press. It is said they were allowed to have fruits and dainties and treated as though they were patients in a hospital rather than criminals facing the hangman's noose.

The big questions raised are: "Why was the sheriff's office so lax?" Did not sheriff Markgraf know what was going on? "If not, why not?" "Who is running the county jail, the sheriff or the guards?" What was the sheriff elected for? What reason can he give to the voters of Will County who put him in office for the jail break? "Whose fault does he say it is?" The voters of Will County as well as every right thinking person is utterly disgusted with this farce which has made Will County the laughing stock of the country.

The many revelations that have come to light such as leaving doors unlocked in the jail so when the convicts got out of their cells they had no difficulty to get outside to freedom, are astonishing. It is hard to believe that men who swore to do their duty to uphold the law, would turn traitor and turn savage men no better than the wild beasts of the jungle lose on society for the sake of a few pieces of silver in emulation of Judas of old but when one sees so many instances of laxity of the law all over the land, one feels that there must be something to such an idea. It is sad but nevertheless true, men today will dam their very innermost souls for a little filthy lucre and have no compunction or qualms of conscience if anyone is injured by their dastardly grabs.

The trial of the six Kline murderers has cost the state thousands of dollars and even now it is costing the tax payers $72 a day for 12 guards to prevent the murderers and then when the killers slip out of jail right under the guards very noses, it surely makes a big farce of our minions of the law!

The jury who tried and found the six desperadoes guilty of murder and voted death penalty, knew the facts in the case and their decision should have been respected as final and if such had been done and the hanging had taken place on the date first set a useful police man's life would have been saved and society would be free from a deadly menace. What is the use and where is the logic to stay executions and grant delays which give slick and desperate criminals a fine opportunity to plot and plan ways to cheat the law? Why should 12 men be asked to give up their time and listen to tiresome arguments and court procedure for a period of weeks and then after they return their just verdict have it held in abeyance as was done in the case of the Kline killers.

Capital punishment may seem a harsh way, but it seems to be the only remedy. If more murderers were strung up there would be a more wholesome respect for law as well as for life which is held very cheap now. The sob sister and sentimental stuff is all the bunk and encourages crime. Why not turn all the gunmen, thugs, and killers loose and put the peaceable and law abiding citizens behind the walls of stone for protection. There appears to be little protection from criminals when one reads of the appalling crime conditions the nation over.

The solution of the matter rests with the voters. Clean up politics, divorce it from graft and elect honest men and go out and vote, but do not look at the candidate to see how much pull he has, but look up his character. Be real red blooded men and women and you can do these things. All it takes is a firm determination and a good stiff backbone instead of a jelly fish spine. Let us clean up politics by starting out for cleaner politics and better government right here in our own Will County.

Help Kidneys By Drinking More Water

Take Salts to Flush Kidneys and Help Neutralize Irritating Acids

Kidney and bladder irritations often result from acidity, says a noted authority. The kidneys help filter this acid from the blood and pass it on to the bladder, where it may remain to irritate and inflame, causing a burning, scalding sensation, or setting up an irritation at the neck of the bladder, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night. The sufferer is in constant dread; the water passes sometimes with a scalding sensation and is very profuse; again, there is difficulty in voiding it.

Bladder weakness, most folks call it because they can't control urination. While it is extremely annoying and sometimes very painful, this is often one of the most simple ailments to overcome. Begin drinking lots of soft water, also get about four ounces of Jad Salts from your pharmacist and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast. Continue this for two or three days. This will help neutralize the acids in the system so they no longer are a source of irritation to the bladder and urinary organs, which then act normal again.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is used by thousands of folks who are subject to urinary disorders caused by acid irritation. Jad Salts causes no bad effects whatever.

Here you have a pleasant, effervescent lithia-water drink which may quickly relieve your bladder irritation.

BLOUSES LAVISHLY TRIMMED; BLACK AND WHITE COMPOSE

FASHION is in a lavish mood when it comes to embroidering the blouse. If you are at all gifted in the art of needlework, the blouse of the present is opportunity knocking at your door, coaxing to use your talent to the glory of the present-day modes.

Lovely is a white jersey blouse enlivened with realistic flowers—daisies, buttercups, forget-me-nots and wild roses—done in wool yarns in colors true to nature. When one considers its effectiveness, the simplicity of the work is amazing. Even an amateur need not hesitate to undertake it. A few "lazy daisy" stitches, considerable outlining stitch, a solid worked flower here and there, and presto! you cross-stitch embroidery to the finest of crepe de chine models.

The mode continues to "say it" most emphatically in black and white, and this, too, when colors were never more entrancing. However, since the fashionable wardrobe must contain many costumes for many occasions, black and white plus all the colors of the rainbow are not more than enough when it comes to catering to the whims of millady.

As to the black-and-white mode, without a doubt it is making a record display this season. When it comes to carrying the message of that intangible something called "style," there is no combination quite so con-are the possessor of a blouse which will excite both the envy and admiration of all who behold.

There's this about the hand-stitchery of today: it individualizes the garment it adorns. That is, it becomes a very part both of the costume design and its color scheme. In no instance is this so definitely stressed as in connection with the present black and white vogue, enthusiasm for which is sweeping throughout the world of fashion. The smartness of black embroidery on white is artfully told in the two-piece frock here portrayed. At a private exhibit of exclusive modes held by the Fashion Art League of America, this stunning costume occasioned much favorable comment. The skirt is of black satin and the blouse of heavy white crepe de chine, the same harmonized to the black and white ensemble by means vincing as black with white. Startling effects as here pictured are the stylist's pride this season. An interesting feature in the development of this black-with-white flat crepe dress is the skirt which alternates the plaits in striking contrast. One notes this treatment not only in connection with the black-and-white compose, but repeatedly when two colors or materials are employed. There's a bit of embroidery on the girdle.

Methods of interpreting the black-and-white vogue are many and varied. Some there are who prefer the all-black costume enlivened with dainty white accessories. A smart black crepe or crepe-back satin frock with a becoming and fashionable flat neckline either V-shaped or square, a rope of pearls and a cluster of white violets on the shoulder, a white fur-collared black satin coat, topped with

FISH COOKERY

Fish does not require long cooking, nor the slow cooking of varieties of meat. The connecting tissues of fish are more gelatinous and very tender, therefore they soften quickly under the application of heat.

Most fish would taste better, be more nourishing and palatable if cooked about half as long as the average cook cooks it. This does not mean that any fish should ever be served undercooked. Europeans and Asiatics use fish more freely than we Americans do, and they cook it much more deliciously, with highly seasoned sauces, dressings and stuffings which add to and bring out the flavor of the fish. They take especial care not to destroy the flavor itself by long, slow cooking that toughens the fibers, dries up the natural juices and loses the flavor altogether.

There are so many ways of serving fish acceptably; here are but a few: Baked, broiled or fried, escalloped, molded, pickled, smoked, spiced in chowders and broths.

Fish should be served more often than once a week, and that on Friday. Often one is able to get much better fish any other day in the week and at a lower price, as many women think because Friday is regarded as fish day the fish will be better, when the contrary is true more often, as the market man finds it hard to supply the demand on that day and will buy and store fish for the Friday market.

If the housewife would patronize her nearest fish dealer impartially throughout the week, as she does the grocer and baker as well as the butcher, she would not only help herself but would find that the market could afford to lower its price. Naturally the man who has a good fish trade only one day in the week will make as much profit on that one day as possible.

Fresh Trout.—In camp nothing in the food line can compare with fried trout or baked in the coals of a camp fire. When frying lay the fish, nicely cleaned and dried trout into a hot pan with plenty of butter; brown first on one side, then on the other, adding salt and pepper while cooking. When the fish is brown it is ready to serve.

Special Good Things.

Fortunately we are not all alike in our tastes. Food of which one is especially fond will not be at all acceptable to his neighbor. This diversity of tastes gives us many dishes, and he is indeed hard to suit who is not able to find some to his liking.

The tender hearts of celery well chilled and filled with creamed cheese make a most tasty accompaniment to a lettuce salad.

Sauteed Egg Sandwiches.—Finely chop four hard cooked eggs, then pound them to a paste with two tablespoonfuls of butter, adding gradually two tablespoonfuls of cream; stir until well blended and of the right consistency to spread; add more cream if needed. Season with salt, pepper and a few grains of cayenne. Have ready twelve thin slices of white bread, spread six slices generously with the mixture, cover with the remaining slices, press firmly together and dip each sandwich into egg and milk beaten together, allowing two tablespoonfuls of milk for each egg. Saute in an equal measure of lard and butter, browning well on both sides. Serve hot at once.

College Pudding.—Mix one-half cupful of butter with one and one-half cupfuls of sugar, add four eggs well beaten, one-half cupful of strained apple sauce, a fourth of a teaspoonful of salt and the juice of lemon. Line a pudding dish with plain pastry, fill with the mixture and chill. Serve with or without cream.

Sponge Pudding.—Stir one cupful of flour into a cupful of milk until smooth. Set in boiling water and cook. Cool and add the yolks of three beaten eggs, a teaspoonful of melted butter with one-fourth of a cupful of sugar. Cut and fold in the whites of the eggs, beaten stiff. Bake in a well buttered baking dish set into hot water. Bake until puffed and the egg well set. Serve with the following sauce: Cream four tablespoonfuls of butter and add one-half cupful of sugar and a teaspoonful of boiling water; flavor with nutmeg or vanilla; chill before serving.

Toasted Cheese With Nuts.—Cut thin slices of rich cheese a trifle smaller than saltine crackers. Arrange the crackers in a dripping pan, cover with the sliced cheese and over each place a half of a pecan nut or English walnut meat. Sprinkle with salt and pepper and set in the oven to brown.

Speedy Dogs Used to Protect Sheep

Trained greyhounds have been enlisted by western sheep raisers in the war against the coyote. Two of the dogs made a record in a few weeks last fall when they killed 22 of the marauders, says Popular Mechanics Magazine. Their speed enabled them to overtake the swift coyote and they learned how to work together, one dog grabbing the prey by a hind leg while the other sprang at its throat. In severe winters especially, the coyote does great damage to the flocks, and it is a menace to poultry the year around. The government and the states co-operate in efforts to exterminate the animal. Professional hunters and poisoners are employed, and in most western states a bounty is given for a coyote scalp. At certain times of the year, the pelt is valuable for fur. The use of greyhounds is considered unusual, for although the dogs were known to be faster than the coyote, many did not believe that they would be a match for the brutes when cornered, for then the coyote, generally a coward, is a savage fighter.

Napoleon Bonaparte

(Part I)

A LEAN, shy, undersized youth of twenty-five hung about Paris in 1794, looking for employment. He was a fairly good writer and had at one time planned a literary career; but in this field he had failed and had, therefore, returned to military life. He had served with distinction in the army of the new French republic, but the convention could find no further use for his services. He was miserably poor, chafing at inaction and without prospects. Within ten years he was destined to be emperor of France and the most powerful and famous man on earth.

The lonely, unemployed youth was Napoleon Bonaparte, one of the thirteen children of an Italian lawyer living in Corsica. At the age of ten young Bonaparte had been sent to a military school, where his poverty, shyness and ignorance of French (a language he never learned to speak without accent) made him unpopular and laughed at by his schoolmates. Many of these same schoolmates were one day to be the fawning, cringing servants of the lad they now despised. When he was sixteen Bonaparte was commissioned a lieutenant of artillery and at twenty-one was a captain. The army was divided between allegiance to King Louis XVI and the new revolutionary party. Bonaparte sided with the latter. When he noted the cowardice with which Louis yielded to the mob, he muttered:

"It is all up with him! A few charges of grape would scatter that pack of curs." He stored the lesson in his memory and later put it to use.

In September, 1793, as lieutenant-colonel of artillery, it was his strategic skill that won Toulon from England. For this he was promoted to the rank of brigadier-general—and allowed to wander idly and hungrily about Paris looking for work! He is even said, at this time, to have planned to offer his services to the sultan of Turkey. But at the ebb of his fortune a sudden turn came. In October, 1795, the people of Paris rose against the convention. Thirty thousand strong they marched on the Tuilleries. Barras, president of the convention, appointed Bonaparte to command the 5,000 troops at that body's disposal. Bonaparte turned his artillery into the advancing mob of guardsmen, townsfolk and ruffian and sent them flying. In reward he was placed in command of the Army of the Interior. His career had begun.

He married, March 9, 1796, Josephine Beauharnais, a rather elderly Creole widow from Martinique. She did not love Bonaparte, but married him because Barras told her the youth had a future. She was notoriously unfaithful to this new husband of hers, and repaid his ardent devotion with mere tolerance. Almost directly after the marriage the young bridegroom was sent to take charge of France's Italian army, which had been dragging on an indecisive warfare against Austria and Sardinia. He had a ragged, unpaid host of 40,000. The allied Austrians and Sardinians were far stronger; yet inside of five days Bonaparte had whipped them together and separately, and within a month had won all northern Italy for France. He ended the campaign by forcing Austria to cede territory and indemnity.

Breaking every old tradition and established rule of warfare, exercising wondrous ingenuity, swiftness and audacity, the Corsican had completely dazed and outwitted his slower-brained foes. And these same unexpected and genius-bred tactics were to serve him against many another foe. He returned in triumph to Paris, when he was sent, early in 1798, with 36,000 men to invade Egypt. This expedition, so far as concerned the Mamelukes and Turkish armies he encountered, was a brilliant success for French arms. But Bonaparte's fleet was destroyed by the English, and the garrison of Acre, made up partly of Englishmen, successfully resisted his attack.

From first to last, England was Bonaparte's stumbling block. In his time he thrashed and bullied and browbeat every other nation, as the school bully might the littlest boy. But whenever he clashed with England he soon or late met disaster. While Bonaparte was in Cairo on his return from Syria news came of French defeats in Italy and of a political crisis in Paris. Also—and to him, at that time, perhaps, most important of all—came private advices of Josephine's open flirtation with other men. The triple tidings sufficed to send Bonaparte hurrying back home, leaving his army to shift for itself.

He reached Paris at the crucial moment of the governmental crisis, and, by taking advantage of every turn of fortune as foreseen by his rare diplomacy, he succeeded in winning the position of first consul.

Then it was that the man's true character showed forth. His was a double ambition—first to make France strong at home and terrible abroad, and, second—and above all—to win for himself the highest obtainable power and glory. He set to work restoring order and prosperity to his unsettled country, conciliating rival factions and framing a new and inspired code of laws. Then he put into action his plan to conquer the world.

The Good Detective

Grant Crabtree, chief clerk of the New York police department, described at a dinner a brilliant piece of work on the part of a New York detective.

"Yes," Mr. Crabtree ended. "George found three hairs from the murderer's mustache, and the rest was easy. A little knowledge is a dangerous thing—if a detective like George gets hold of it."

The neatest rap at the emancipated young women of today, who pride themselves upon their freedom in talking about sex, is a brief passage in a little skit just published in London.

"In fact," another replies, "you can't talk to her about anything else."

Stage Set For Will County Sheriff Election Recount

that the Books, Tally Sheets and Envelopes were not proven.

On Cross examination by Mr. Martin, Mr. Delander testified that people on both sides had examined the poll books but that the tally sheets were looked up in the vault.

Mr. Martin asked if any of the Attorneys for Mr. Markgraf had examined the poll books to which Mr. Delander replied to the contrary. Mr. Martin asked who examined them for the defendant and Mr. Delander replied "Bob Haley."

Mr. Nadelhoffer asked Mr. Delander if he had ever seen he or Attorney Anderson examining the books. The reply was not to his knowledge. Mr. Martin asked if any of the plaintiff's side had examined them and Mr. Delander replied several men for several days but did not remember who they were when asked if he knew the names of these men.

The next witness was Deputy Clerk William Sorg, but Mr. Sorg was busy in the County Clerk's office and in the County Court Room on November 3rd, 1926 when the election returns were being made so had nothing to do with the ballot sacks. He testified that he has never been in the vault from the day of election until one hour before when he went there to obtain the official tally sheets to be offered as evidence.

Frank Zielenksi was next called. Mr. Zielenksi and George Anderson were the two deputy County Clerks who received the ballot sacks. Mr. Zielenksi also took the last returns of Green Garden which did not come in until late in the afternoon of November 3rd, 1926. Mr. Zielenksi testified that about 2 weeks after election he went to the vault and took from the vault the poll books of the Primary Election held in April 1926. At another time he went to the vault with two supervisors and obtained a box of old claims against the County but the ballot sacks were untouched.

Mr. Robert Martin withdrew his objection to "Record of Ballots" book, poll books, tally sheets and envelope. Mr. George Anderson, the other Deputy County Clerk was in Chicago and did not testify, but the attorneys compromised and took it for granted his testimony would be practically the same as Mr. Zielenksi's.

Mr. Robert Martin asked that the petitioners who are Alvah M. Weston, William J. Bolton, David A. Martin and Howard Norton prove themselves electors. Mr. Weston and Mr. Bolton had little trouble proving themselves electors, but Mr. David A. Martin was born in Scotland and did not have his papers in Court and was excused until later at which time he will have the papers.

A little humor was injected into the proceedings and enjoyed by the many visitors in court when Mr. Martin asked Mr. Weston who was vouching as to Mr. Norton's being an elector, if he knew when Mr. Norton was born. Mr. Weston replied he did not but that he thought he was so old and was born at Lockport. Mr. Martin asked that the testimony be stricken because it was only hearsay. Mr. Anderson said it was only hearsay that Mr. Martin knew the day he was born on. Mr. Anderson said Mr. Martin was there but did not know what day he was born on until his mother told him years afterward and that was hearsay.

Mr. Nadelhoffer asked the Court for an order to recount the ballots and appoint tellers and a man to unstring the ballots. He suggested that insofar as the ballots were to be in custody of the County Clerk at all times that he appoint a member of the County Clerks' office to this position.

The costs of this election will be paid for by the loser of this contest and will not cost the tax payers of this County anything. Up to the present time petitioners have paid all costs and the first to accrue are the witness fees to be paid the witnesses. The tellers will be paid by the side they are acting for and the man who unstrings the ballots will be paid one-half by each side.

Mr. Nadelhoffer cited several cases handed down by the Supreme Court as to why the petitioners are entitled to a recount. Mr. Nadelhoffer contends that as long as a valid petition is filed and the security of costs is approved, then the petitioners are entitled to a recount as a matter of right.

Mr. Donovan answered Mr. Nadelhoffer and claimed the petitioners were not entitled to a recount because they had not shown as yet any proof of what was put in their petition and asked that the court have them prove their allegations as set out in the petition. Mr. Donovan cited two or three cases as handed down by the Supreme Court.

Mr. David Anderson was to answer Mr. Donovan at the next session of Court Tuesday at 2:30 p. m., but as Mr. Anderson is ill a continuance was granted to Thursday morning at 9:30 a. m.

[The News-Bulletin will publish an account each week as to the results of the recount.]

Mr. Taylor is a Baritone Soloist for the Northwestern University Glee Club. He was scheduled to sing at Mokena at one other time, but due to unavoidable circumstances could not come. "There is no doubt but that Mr. Taylor will be with us this Sunday evening, March 27th," says Rev. Beatty, of the Methodist Church. "He has promised that nothing in his power will detain him."

Mr. Taylor will occupy the larger part of the service. He plans to sing solo numbers from Elijah, The Penitent, The Twenty-Third Psalm. All of the community is welcomed to hear Mr. Taylor.

Mr. Taylor will also sing at the Tinley Park Methodist Church at the eleven o'clock morning service.

Mrs. George Lauffer attended the funeral of her father held at Crete last week. He died at the old soldiers home in Marshalltown, Iowa.

Monday morning an experiment was tried at the Mokena public school by way of having the school begin at 8:30 o'clock in the morning and closing at 3:30 o'clock in the afternoon, but some of the parents filed objections against the change in time so the old time was in force again Tuesday morning.

Andrew Jackson's Politics

Andrew Jackson is popularly supposed to have started the modern Democratic party. It was to a large extent the successor of the Jeffersonians. But Old Hickory himself did not apply the name "Democratic" to his followers. During his Presidency and after his retirement to the Hermitage, in all his correspondence he called himself a Republican and spoke of his party as the Republican party.—Pathfinder Magazine.

Bird Migration

The reason why birds migrate is a mystery to biologists. They have been studying for hundreds of years to find out and are as much in the dark today as they were 200 years ago, according to Dr. Alexander Wetmore, president of the American Ornithological union.

WORTH

Worth township is again facing the problem of a possible establishment of another cemetery—also colored again.

A tract of 53 acres, the old William Henry farm, located at the southwest corner of 115th and 52nd Avenue, has been sold to five Chicago men for the consideration of about $1,000 per acre.

Friday and Saturday a lone workman was on the scene, digging what he said was "a pit for a light to guide airplanes," but it had all the appearances of a grave. It is located about 150 feet west on 115th street from 52nd Avenue, just a stone's throw from the Hazel Green standard schoolhouse, a modern educational structure.

The hole is about 7 feet long and about 3 feet wide. Three large pieces of tile connect the excavation with the drainage ditch on 115th street, the northern point of the "grave" being about 6 feet from the extreme northern end of the plot. Sunday the hole was about half full of water—the work of drainage not being completed.

This land is located about 6 blocks due east of the extreme eastern boundary of the village of Worth and to protect her citizens from the menace of a cemetery with its unhealthful conditions, the village of Worth, thru its Mayor Percy Woods, has ordered armed guards on duty to prevent any burial. The guards are under the leadership of Motorcycle Patrolman, Robert Crandall of Worth's force.

Under the Illinois Law, a cemetery can be established within a mile of the boundary of any city or village and it is this provision which Worth will use to stop a cemetery on this site. On the southwestern corner of this highway intersection 115th and 52nd Avenue, there is now established the Hazel Green Cemetery, an old family burial ground. The Hazel Green school occupies about an acre and a half facing north on the southwest corner of 115th and 52nd Avenue. With the exception of this land, a fence boundary on 52nd Avenue and about 300 feet west from the corner on 115th street, comprise the 53 acres sold.

J. M. Gibbons and Bros., real estate operators, with offices at 11415 So. Michigan Avenue, Roseland, were the brokers in the deal. They claim that they sold the land more than a year ago to a Chicago Syndicate, but that the purchaser did not record the deed until about a week ago. The Roseland realtors do not remember the name of any one of the syndicate, nor do they have records to show who they sold to. They say that the deed is in trust with the Pullman Trust & Savings Bank now, subject to a mortgage of $16,000. They further do not remember whether or not the subject of a cemetery was included in the deed.

Frick's Death of National Interest

Funeral services for Alfred Frick, 22, until recently employed in the Merchandise Sales Department of the Public Service Company of Northern Illinois at Park Ridge, were held from the home of his parents in Crystal Lake, Sunday afternoon March 13, at 2 o'clock. Rev. R. W. Putman of the Crystal Lake Methodist Episcopal church officiated. Burial was in Union cemetery, Crystal Lake. The services were attended by scores of Public Service Company employees from Evanston and Park Ridge as well as a number of the company officials from Chicago. Six young men all of whom had aided Frick in his gallant fight for life, were pallbearers.

Frick's case sprang into national prominence when it became known that he was being kept alive by artificial respiration administered by fellow employees of the Public Service Company, who are trained regularly in resuscitation and first aid methods, following paralysis of his diaphragm Sunday morning, Mar. 6th. On Saturday he had become seriously ill and was taken to the St. Francis hospital in Evanston, where his illness was diagnosed as Landry's paralysis.

At 10 o'clock Sunday morning he ceased breathing, but was kept alive for 108 hours and 12 minutes by artificial respiration. More than 50 employees of the Public Service Company, organized in shifts and working in pairs, were constantly beside the stricken man, compressing and releasing his lungs in regular cadence similar to that of natural respiration.

Thursday night, however, it became evident Frick would be unable to survive the paralytic stroke, although until that time physicians had believed it possible that his remarkable endurance would carry him through.

His death occurred at 12 minutes after 10, Thursday night, March 10.

ORLAND

Bible School at 9:30 a. m.
Morning worship at 10:30. The sermons are dealing with the Lenten and Pre-Easter season of the year. You are invited to worship with us if you have no church home and live in this community.

Evening Special. The service is an Intercommunity one. The Rev. Paul T. Sanders of the Worth Community church will preach. The Worth and Orland Choirs will render special music. It will be a service of high spiritual interest and endeavors to prepare us for the Intercommunity Passion Week services which will soon follow.

On the three Sunday evenings in April there will be special colored pictures and talks on the Life of Christ. The climax will be given Easter Sunday evening.

Last Sunday evening there was a meeting of unusual interest at the church. A brief vesper service was held, then a song service and the pastor introduced Mr. Lester Mahaffy of Palos Park who spoke on the significance of the Lenten season from a layman's point of view. Everyone there expressed their appreciation of Mr. Mahaffy's talk.

The pastor also gave a little sermonette in regard to the necessity of taking time for daily devotions and meditation.

Master Gordon Kay is slowly improving but is still confined to his bed.

Mrs. Louis Arnold is recovering from a serious operation at the Burnside Hospital.

Several additional cases of measles are reported in the community. This epidemic has affected both public and Sunday school attendance.

The James Greer boys have recovered from their recent illness and were able to attend Sunday school and church last Sunday.

Following the adopted policy the church and Worth unites with the Orland M. E. Church this coming Sunday evening at the Orland church. The service is at 7:30.

Features of the evening will be the vesper prayers, the songs by the two church choirs and the address by Rev. Paul Sanders of the Worth Community church.

All are welcome!

The Modern Woodmen of Oak Lawn Camp No. 12054 will give a very fine minstrel show at the Oak Lawn School Auditorium on March 25th and 26th—two nights with a dance following the Saturday night show. Everybody is invited to attend and we assure you of having an enjoyable evening. Curtain rises at 8:15 sharp. Harry C. Phillips, Venerable Consul.

Stock-Yards Horse

Answers Telephone

South Omaha, Neb.—Black Knight, an eight-year-old horse ridden by Will H. Wood, commission merchant in the stock yards here, answers his master's telephone.

Wood has an extension telephone mounted in a box near the cattle pens. Black Knight has learned to distinguish Wood's ring from those of other merchants. Hearing it, the horse at once goes to the telephone box and slides up to the instrument, so that the call may be answered without the rider dismounting.

There has been no attempt to teach the horse the trick. He apparently noted that the master responded when the telephone rang, and put two and two together.

Attic for Billiards New House Feature

© Celotechnic Institute, Chicago, 1926.

A BILLIARD ROOM in the private home ranks with most people along with a country estate and its artificial lake, a gallery for musicians and other luxuries of the rich. There is no reason, though, why this clean, wholesome game should not be played right at home by every member of the family, without their scattering outside in search of fun and recreation. Very few small homes can afford an extra room just for the billiard table, but practically all have attics sitting on top of them, idle year after year. A little planning, a little work and a little money will turn almost any attic into a first-class home billiard room.

The space required is not great. A small home billiard table is about three by six feet, so that the space necessary for playing may be as small as twelve by fifteen feet. The first consideration is to make the attic comfortable as to temperature all the year round, and the second is to give a good appearance so that you will be proud to take guests up to the new billiard room. These two matters can be attended to in one operation by sealing the under side of the rafters and the side walls with insulating lumber that will offer remarkable resistance to the passage of heat and cold, at the same time doing away with the necessity for lath and plaster. In a room of this sort, the lumber may well be left untreated, simply covering the joints with molding or strips of the same lumber, beveled.

In sealing the attic, especial care should be taken where the rafters meet the side walls of the house, as this is the point where most of the hot air escapes from the inside or comes in from the outside, depending on the time of year. In extreme climates or where one is to be almost totally dependent on the heat from the rest of the house for warming the attic, a double layer of the insulating lumber would be better. A small electric, gas or oil heater, will provide what little heat is needed in addition to the heat rising from below.

The floor should be as level as possible although most tables have adjustable devices on the legs. The floor should be covered with a plain piece of carpeting or even left bare.

If the house is wired for electricity, extension cords may be run up to the attic and dropped down, one over each end of the table. The length of the cords must be carefully adjusted. Opaque green shades are inexpensive and satisfactory. The racks for the cues and other apparatus may be nailed to the walls. Put serviceable curtains at the windows, add a couple of chairs that can be spared from downstairs and a smoking stand for the men, and you have a billiard room which will keep the boys at home and be a source of pleasure the year round.

Caves Hold Relics

of Three Periods

Several hidden caves, containing prehistoric finds of three distinct periods—the Stone, Bronze, and Iron ages—were recently discovered in the forests of Felsberg, near Graubunden, Germany. Representatives of the Historical and Archeological association, under the auspices of the Rätischer museum, have been excavating the caves and have come upon an amazing number of important articles, including bones of household and other animals, pottery of the Stone period, quartz stones, which were probably used as cooking utensils; bronze jewelry, stone tools, pieces of coal and numerous other articles. Fingerprints were found on two pieces of pottery. One of the most interesting finds was a fireplace built out of stones and lime in the rear of one of the caves.

"Black Beauty" Still Leads

Judged by figures given out by the children's library of Jackson county, Oregon, "Black Beauty" still remains the most popular book among the youth of the land. It was found that in 36 schools where 5,514 books were distributed, "Black Beauty" was the most frequently read and "Tom Sawyer" was next.

"Off it," I repeated.

"Off it," he repeated impatiently.

"Since his Most Catholic Majesty hath a just claim to all lands in these parts—on this side of Hudson's river, at any rate."

"To be sure, to be sure," I assented quickly. "But, Monsieur Joncaire, you will be interested to know there is an accursed tribe of savages who do not believe as you do."

"Is that so, Jean? And who may they be?"

"The Messagues."

"His face lighted up.

"They are in De Tonty's country. And how is the dear Alphonse?"

"Fleeing for his life, no less."

"Those same accursed Messagues, monsieur, rose up against us, and Monsieur de Tonty must flee to the northward and make the journey through the country of the Hurons."

"A look of grave concern overspread Joncaire's face.

"Are you certain of this, Jean?"

"Beyond doubt, monsieur; for my friend, the Wolf here, smuggled a message from me to Monsieur de Tonty, who bade me come at once to you that you might hold up all west-bound canoes."

"Humph!" he growled. "Have you been long in Canada, Jean?"

"But this year, monsieur."

"Humph!" growled Joncaire again.

"And where do you come from, Jean?"

Something in his speech warned me—the liquid slur of the South.

"I, monsieur!" I replied innocently.

"Oh, I am of Picardy. But monsieur is of the south—no? of Provence?"

All the suspicion fled from Joncaire's face, and in its stead blossomed a broad smile.

"Peste!" he ejaculated. "Tis a clever lad! And how knew you that, Jean?"

I was overjoyed—and in no need to simulate my sentiments. This was good fortune.

"Was I not camping beside the Regiment de Provence when we were on the Italian frontier? 'Tis a pleasant way those lads have of talking. And such good companions with the bottle! Ah, for some of that warm southern wine at this moment instead of the accursed rum. Rum is good only for savages."

"You say truth," applauded Joncaire. "Come your ways within, Jean, and you shall taste of the blood of La Belle France—although it be not our Provence vintage. By the way, do you know Provence?"

"I cannot say so with honesty, monsieur," I fenced, "although I have been in Arles."

"In Arles!"

He flung his arms around my neck.

"Jean, I love you, my lad! I was born in St. Remi, which is but a short distance out in the diocese."

We were now in the entrance of the log house, and Joncaire opened wide the door.

"Jean, you are a lad in a million!" he pronounced. "You shall drink deep. I have some wine which Bigon the intendant fetched out for a few of us—you will understand you must say naught of it hereafter; it never paid duty. Aye, we shall make a fine night of it, and you shall tell me of all that has passed in Arles these many years. He clapped his hands, and a soldier entered.

"Francis," announced Joncaire, "this is Jean Courbevoir, who will be my guest until he departs. He has been in Arles, Francis. Remember that. What he orders you will render to him. Now bring us the flagon of wine which Monsieur Bigon sent out this spring."

The soldier saluted me as if I were a marshal of France and brought in the flagon of the intendant's wine with the exquisite reverence which only a son of France could bestow upon the choicest product of the soil of France.

"Pour it out, Francis," commanded Joncaire.

The soldier hesitated.

"And Monsieur de Lery?" he said.

"A thousand million curses!" exploded Joncaire. "Am I to wait for him? Am I to sacrifice my choicest wine in his gullet?"

"Who is Monsieur de Lery?" I asked as Francis filled a thick mug with the ruby juice.

"What? You do not know him? This pompous whipper-snapper who sets out to teach Louis Thomas de Joncaire, sieur de Chabert, his duty, after thirty-five years on the frontier—pah! He is—"

"Monsieur de Lery enters," interposed Francis with a glance at the doorway.

A slender, wiry little man in a wig several sizes too big for him strode into the room. He favored me with a curious glance, nodded to Joncaire and took a seat across the table from me.

My host made a wry smile and motioned Francis to bring a third mug.

"Holla, Monsieur de Lery," he said. "This is a gallant young forest-runner, one Jean Courbevoir, who has come to tell me that charming idiot Alphonse de Tonty has been chased out of Le de Troit by the Messagues, Jean, Monsieur de Lery is the king's engineer officer in Canada."

"Another case of a log fortification, I suppose," remarked de Lery sarcastically in a dry, crackling voice. "You gentlemen will never learn."

"You must think we grow lous d'or instead of furs in Canada," growled Joncaire. "Be sure, we of the wilderness posts are the most anxious to have stone walls around us. Well, what headway have you made?"

"I have traced out the lines of the central mass," replied de Lery, taking a gulp of the wine. "Tomorrow I shall mark out a surrounding work of four bastions to encompass it."

He rose from his seat.

"Speaking for myself, I have had sufficient wine, and I shall retire. If the masons bring in the loads of stone we expect in the morning, we shall be able to lay the first course by noon."

Joncaire twisted his face into a grimace as de Lery ascended a steep flight of ladder-stairs to an upper story.

"What is the difficulty, monsieur?" I inquired sympathetically.

"Why, at last I have persuaded this stupid, timorous government of ours to build me a proper fort. 'Tis the only way we shall hold the sacre English in check. With a fort here we can control in some measure the intercourse betwixt the western tribes and the English. Also, we shall have a constant threat here to keep the Iroquois at peace.

"Well, I worked up Vaudreuil to approve it, obtained the grants from Paris, secured the necessary mechanics—and then they sent this popinjay to supervise the work. I had pitched on this site here. He would have none of it. No, he must overturn all my plans and put the new works several miles down the river where it runs into the lake. He is conceited with himself because he has been charged with all the works of fortification in Canada."

"Are there others then, monsieur?" I asked casually, busying my nose in the wine-mug.

"Aye, to be sure. He is to build a wall around Montreal, and to strengthen the enceinte of Quebec."

"But we are at peace with these sacre English," I objected.

Joncaire, now thoroughly convivial, winked at me over the rim of his mug.

"For the present, yes. But how long, Jean? Every year that passes the English grow in strength, and we become weaker; I speak now in matters of trade; for after all, lad, the country which obtains the mastery in trade must be the military master of any contending nation. I may be only a simple soldier, but so much I have learned."

"We are a colony of soldiers and traders, well armed and disciplined. They are an infinitely larger group of colonies with only a few soldiers and traders, but many husbandmen. Give them time, and they will obtain such a grip on the soil of the wilderness that they cannot be pried loose. But if we use our temporary advantage, and keep them from winning supremacy in the trade with the savages, then, my Jean, we may force a war upon them at an early day, and we shall win."

He sat back triumphantly.

"Surely we have that supremacy now!"

He winked at me again, and drew from a drawer in the table a heavy book such as accounts are kept in.

"Jean," he said, "I am about to disclose to you a secret—which is not a secret, because every trader who works for himself is acquainted with it."

"Here is the account for this post for the year just ended. We handled a total of 204 'green' deerskins and 23 packets of various kinds of furs. On these we cleared a profit of 2,382 livres, 3 sols, 9 deniers (about $476), which would not come anywhere near covering the operating expenses of the post. You will find the same story at every post from here to the Mississippi."

"Why, monsieur?"

"These sacre English! First they turn the Iroquois against us; then they build the post of Fort Oswego, at the foot of the Onondaga river on Irondequoit bay (now Oswego, N. Y.); then they send out a swarm of young men to trap and shoot in the Indian country; then they pass this accursed law that forbids us obtaining Indian goods from the New York merchants! Peste, what a people! They have us in a noose."

I shook my head dolefully.

"Ah, monsieur, you make me very sorrowful," I said. "I came out to Canada thinking to make my fortune, but if what you say be true, I am more likely to be killed by the English."

"No, no, it's not so bad as that," he answered quickly. The governor-general has waked up. It seems that in France they are not quite ready for another war, but we are charged to make preparations as rapidly as possible. There is an emissary coming soon from Paris, who will have instructions for the frontier posts and the friendly Indians. It may be we can persuade the English to be stupid enough to revoke this law of theirs. In any case, my Jean, you will have heard of the Doom Trail?"

I crossed myself devoutly.

"I have heard nothing good of it, monsieur," I said fearfully.

"Humph; I don't doubt it. And mind you, Jean, for myself, I do not like that kind of business. But after all 'tis trade over the Doom Trail which keeps you and me in our jobs. Without it—well, this post would shut down. And they do say at Quebec that if we can start a revolution in England for this Pretender of theirs and war at the same time, we shall be able to take the whole continent from them."

There was a commotion at the door.

"Bind the Indian," shouted a voice in French. "Hah, I thought so! We meet again, Ormerod!"

De Veulle stood on the threshold, his rifle leveled at my breast.

"Bring the Indian inside here," he called behind him.

A group of Cahnugas, frightfully painted, with their grotesque bristling feather headdresses, hustled Ta-wan-nears into the room.

But now Joncaire asserted himself.

"What do you mean by this, Monsieur de Veulle?" he demanded. "This man is a forest-runner, Jean Courbevoir, a messenger from De Tonty. The Indian is a Messague—as you should see by his paint and headwork."

"Bah!" sneered de Veulle. "They fooled you. The Indian is Ta-wan-nears, of the Seneca Wolves, war chief of the Iroquois. The white man is Harry Ormerod, an English spy and a deserter from the Jacobites. He was stationed in Paris for some years, and recently was sent to New York. Burnet, the governor of New York, dispatched him here to spy out what you are doing."

"That may be so," assented Joncaire; "but it happens that I command here. These men are my prisoners. You will order your Indians from the room. Francis, get your musket and stand guard."

De Veulle drew a paper from a pocket inside his leather shirt and presented it to Joncaire with irritating deliberation.

Small Fortune Paid for Gutenberg Bible

Recently at Vienna, an American dealer paid $220,585 for a copy of the Gutenberg Bible. It belonged to an abbey in Austria, and the owners had to get official leave from the Austrian government before they could sell their treasure. They obtained by far the biggest price ever paid for a book.

Yet a still higher price is on record as having been once offered. In the Seventeenth century the monks of St. Emmeran possessed a notable manuscript of the Gospels, which had been presented to their abbey by the Emperor Henry IV.

The elector of Bavaria admired it so much that he proposed to give these monks the town of Straubingen in exchange.

But they were prudent men. They knew the elector could, and they suspected that he would, retake the town whenever he pleased, so they declined his offer and kept their precious manuscript.

The Bible which the dealer bought is a magnificent copy on vellum of the first book ever printed in Europe from metal types.

The Vital Spark

Are not the poets themselves to blame that poetry is not more widely read? Beautiful wandering aimless lines soon fade without an idea. Is satire—impudent, personal, biting—a genuine poetic mood? Are beautifully trimmed and hedged gardens the best inspiration for poetizing human nature? Are the literary teas of social climbers the best laboratories for poetizing human nature? And yet an inconsequential leaf in the air may seem vital and important if to the poet it is vital and important.—Marie Luhrs, in Poetry.

REVIEW—STUDIES IN THE CHRISTIAN LIFE

GOLDEN TEXT—If ye love Me keep My commandments.—John 14:15.

PRIMARY TOPIC—What Jesus Wants Us to Do.

JUNIOR TOPIC—The Christian Way of Living.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—What It Means to Be a Christian.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Marks of a True Christian.

The following methods of review are suggested:

I. A Descriptive Essay Method.

Each member of the class should be assigned to the task a week ahead of the preparation of an essay on the topics involved in the quarterly lessons, as for example: What constitutes a true Christian. Following Christ. The prayer life of a Christian. The Christian and his Bible. The home life of a Christian. Christian stewardship. The Christian and the missionary obligation.

II. The Question Review Method.

The teacher will prepare a list of questions dealing with the various phases of the quarter's lessons. These will be written on slips of paper and the members of the class will draw them. As examples of questions note the following: What does following Christ involve? What is the Christian's responsibility as to his Bible? What is the Christian's obligation as to stewardship? What are the duties of the members of the home? What is the Christian's obligation as to the evangelization of the world? What is the Christian's hope? Is Christ coming again? Will there be a resurrection of the body?

III. The Summary Method.

This method can always be used to good advantage with the advanced classes. The outstanding fact or facts should be grasped and the principal teaching of the quarter's lessons stated. Suggestions:

Lesson for January 2.

Jesus first calls men to be His disciples. He then calls them to have fellowship in His service. Those who receive this two-fold call will walk as He walked.

Lesson for January 9.

The one who really follows Christ shall be hated and opposed. Having fellowship with Christ, he will love his enemies, do good to those who hate him, bless them that curse him, pray for those which despitefully use him.

Lesson for January 16.

The Bible furnishes the Christian with full knowledge of God and man's obligation to Him. The only way to be able to stand firm and true in the coming perilous times is to be thoroughly grounded in the knowledge of the Scriptures.

Lesson for January 23.

Jesus, though divine, resorted much to prayer. If he needed this fellowship, how much more do His followers need it.

Lesson for January 30.

Followers of Jesus may expect temptations, but divine help is available for every need.

Lesson for February 6.

To every believer has been given certain talents such as gifts for service, knowledge, time, money, to be used for the honor of His Lord. A time of reckoning is coming at which reward will be given for fidelity, and judgment meted out for infidelity.

Lesson for February 13.

The home is the oldest and most important institution in the world. The most effective way of making strong and pure the church, society and the nation is to make the home Christian.

Lesson for February 20.

The subject of the kingdom is under solemn obligation to permeate society and let his light shine so that the heavenly father may be glorified.

Lesson for February 27.

Every believer has two natures—the flesh and the spirit. The only way to overcome the flesh is to be filled with the Spirit.

Lesson for March 6.

The Lord permitted persecution to fall upon the church to cause the disciples to be scattered in order for the widening of the testimony.

Lesson for March 13.

Christ has imposed upon every disciple the obligation of witnessing for Him to all the nations of the world.

Lesson for March 20.

The Christian's hope is the personal return of Jesus Christ to take him to His heavenly home. When Christ comes, the body of the believer who has fallen asleep will be resurrected and living believers will be caught up into glory with Christ.

Harder to Do Right

There never has been an age where it was not harder to do right than to do wrong, just as there has never been a time when it was not harder to swim upstream than down.—Herald of Gospel Liberty.

Let Your Light Shine

A light under a bushel, besides being hid, will go out in a short time for want of air. Unless our lights shine for others, they will soon perish in ourselves.—Herald of Gospel Liberty.

WHY SHOULD A YOUNG MAN CARRY LIFE INSURANCE?

1. BECAUSE he wants to save money and this is the safest way to do it.
2. BECAUSE he can surely accumulate a handsome sum of money if he will start now and steadily put aside a small sum every year.
3. BECAUSE he will probably marry and will be wise to get his insurance well started before he has another person to support.
4. BECAUSE Insurance is cheaper for him now than it ever will be again. Every Year Adds to the Cost of It.
